Our Secretary, Mrs. Thornton, received the following letter:

Dear Mrs. Thornton:

March 17, 1968

Enclosed is check for $5.00 for dues in the Jackson (or Madison County) Genealogical Society.

My father's family lived in Jackson for many years and I'm interested in learning more of their history and their lives--Casons, Hamiltons, Nichols, Phipps.

Please put my name on mailing list for any publications you (we) may put out.

Sincerely,

Attie May Cason Davis

For the benefit of out-of-town members, the Mid-West Tennessee Genealogical Society has access to a micro-film reader and photo-copying machine located in the Jackson-Madison County Library. Copies of records found in the library may be made for 10¢ per sheet. Local members of the Society will be glad to check records in the Library and obtain copies of any desired.

ANCESTRALLY SPEAKIN'

The following information was copied from a little brown back book; no name on the outside of the book. It is said to be a brown back speller. Part of the title page is gone, but the following information was on it: A GUIDE TO THE ENGLISH IN TWO. On the next page at the bottom of the page was A<sub>2</sub> and from Dean St. in Fetter Lane, Oct. 27, 1709. On the right hand side of the page was the name THOMAS DYCHE.

The book is now in the possession of Mr. & Mrs. Newton Maxwell, Rt. #3, Bolivar, Tenn., 38008. Mr. Maxwell found it in the old two story house (now no longer standing), in the upstairs part of the house. The house was known as the old Baldy House, located on the Bolivar-Middleton Hwy., about 8 miles S. of Bolivar, near where the Peavine leads off the main highway to Pocahontas. The last residents of the Baldy House were Mr. & Mrs. John T. Sykes, parents of Mrs. Maxwell.

On the front side of the fly leaf is the following: Joseph Rowlet Lacy Book; James H. Lacy, his book Nov. 26, 1814, Departure, Departmen; Haulcoat Lacy Spelling Book June 11, 1800

This brings the extracts from the minutes up to 1900. The meeting day was a Monthly one and in interim periods the church was left without a pastor and in these times bad roads and winter weather kept the people from gathering to worship. It is remarkable that these minutes are preserved, and it has been my pleasure to extract them and present them for publication in our newsletter.

A printed obituary, owned by Robert W. McRae, 235 Linden, Jackson, Tenn., 38301, contains the following:

IN MEMORY OF

ROBERT F. STRIBLING.

He was born in Union District S.C., on the 10th Oct., 1831. Professed religion and joined the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in 1846 or 7., and afterwards became a ruling Elder. Was married to Euphresia E. Anderson, Dec. 14, 1853. He died of Pulmonary Consumption, June 17th, 1868. Thus passed to his long home another kind brother, and good citizen. To his aged parents he ever reported himself as becometh a dutiful son. Was affectionate and kind to his brothers and sisters, all the latter of whom have taken up their walk from earth before him. To his wife and children he was what only a husband and father could be, ever ready under all the changes and vicissitudes of life to meet every desire, and ministered to all their wants. In his long affliction he often said 'I desire to live only for the sake of my little family, who need me so much.' He traveled many months in Florida, hoping to recover his health, but finding he must die, came home to die with his family, and although he never spoke above a whisper after his return, yet he left to his friends every assurance of his acceptance to a better world. To his mourning wife he often said "weep not for me, I will soon be better off than you," then raised his feeble hand would point and say, upward. He asked the blessings and protection of Providence upon his three little girls and bid them be obedient and good. But he is gone! his body slumbers in the silent tomb, and his spirit to the good world above where it may drink of the River of Life, the streams whereof make glad the City of God.
